Orbea's test bikes were all equipped with new Shimano XT drivetrains that worked flawlessly. Enter the redesigned Occam. It is one bike, with 29" hoops, an optional Fox 34 140mm or Fox 36 150mm fork, and 140mm of classic Horst-link suspension out back replacing the UFO flex system. There are no flip chips or wheel size options to fuss over.

On test, the Aria's hydraulic discs offered greater initial bite, no doubt because the bike is a well-used machine and the discs have undergone the required break-in period. Its Vision Trimax front wheel is nicer than the Orbea's Aksium, but the assisted riding experience is remarkably similar, as you might expect given that the two bikes share the same drive system.

A long-time bike sponsor of the Basque-based Euskaltel-Euskadi pro team, Orbea's racing pedigree has been applied year after year to the refinement of its flagship model, the Orca. For model year 2021 Orcas, Orbea has grandfathered much of the high-end OMX tube shaping, originally used on the 2020 model, to the OMR-level carbon frames.
