Craig Mackie And The Kalam

The Kalam cosmological argument is a modern formulation of the cosmological argument for the existence of God.It is named after the kalam (medieval Islamic scholasticism) from which its key ideas originated.It was popularized in the western world by William Lane Craig in his book, The Kalām Cosmological Argument (1979).. The argument's key underpinning idea is the metaphysical impossibility ...

Mackie objects to both premisses of the kalam cosmological argument. Turning his attention first to (2), Mackie asserts that (2.2) just expresses a prejudice against an actual infinity. [2] In the medieval versions of the argument, (2.2) was often portrayed as the impossibility of traversing the infinite.

Interestingly, William Lane Craig attributes this fallacious inference to the late J.L. Mackie in reply to Mackie's criticism of the Kalam argument in the latter's The Miracle of Theism.[1] It's perhaps worth noting that Craig repeats this reply to Mackie's criticism in virtually all of his books and contributing chapters in which he defends the kalam cosmological argument.
